

Cedar Foundation

Cedar found the liV process straightforward to navigate with support from the assessor, especially as this was our first time using the updated standards for self assessment. It was gratifying to know that, although the standards had changed, our practice remained very much aligned to what a high quality volunteer service should be.

Holding external accreditation is an excellent indicator to stakeholders of the value placed on the volunteer service within Cedar.

✓ The benefits of liV for our organisation

The liV process reaffirms the importance of volunteers as their input is crucial to the re-accreditation process.

Maintaining the standard is an external confirmation of the quality of Cedar's volunteer service.

It also highlights the value placed on the service as an integral part of Cedar and endorses the good practices of everyone involved in the service.
